ST. FELIX OF CANTALICE, F.D. MAY 18

St. Felix of Cantalice was born to peasant parents in Cantalice, Italy. As a boy he worked hard as a farm laborer and shepherd, and, in 1543, became a Capuchin lay brother. It is said that he was well noted for his piety. In 1547 he was sent to Rome as questor, begging for bread and wine for the friars, and spent his remaining 38 years aiding the sick and the poor. In Rome, Felix preached in the street, rebuked corrupt politicians and officials, and exhorted young men to stop leading dissolute lives. He also composed simple teaching canticles, and arranged for children to gather in groups to sing them as a way to teach them catechism. Felix was revered by all and was a companion of St. Philip Neri. He was the first Capuchin to be canonized, on May 22, 1712. He is the saint from whom the Felician Sisters take their name.
