Evenings at the Oratory – What are they?

The Oratory grew out of St. Philip's efforts to spread the Gospel, through talks and music, to the people of Rome in the sixteenth century. Each afternoon, four talks were given, on prayer, the life of virtue, and on Church history. In between the talks, music lifted the souls of the listeners to God. These afternoon sessions, called the Secular Oratory, were well-attended by people of all backgrounds: from the most prominent cardinals, prelates, and nobility to the lowest servant. In 1575, when the Oratory first received papal recognition there were forty priests dedicate to this apostolate. Circumstances change. The pace of life today does not permit people to spend every afternoon or evening listening to talks. Nor can a smaller community of priests with other apostolates produce four serious talks every day. Nevertheless, we hope that the Evenings at the Oratory are a legitimate adaptation of Saint Philip's work for our times. Presentation in the Parish Hall followed by refreshments concluded with Sung Compline in the Church.
