For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also.

Don't treasure money: Check. I already know not to focus on wealth. I was feeling pretty pleased with myself, too, until that small voice inside asked: So what, exactly, fills your focus? What's on your mind?

If I'm honest, I'd have to say it's worry. Today, it's my job. Other times I worry about health, finances or relationships. I just have to watch the news for a world of worries. But everyone worries over things we feel are out of our control. Worry is really the fear of what might happen and we can imagine the worst what-ifs. We play those reels over and over, giving that fear more power, more focus, more energy. Ultimately, we make worry our treasure - like J.R.R. Tolkien's character Golum and his ring.

I don't treasure my worries – that's ridiculous! Is it? Don't those worries take up our thoughts and energy? Aren't they what we talk about most and think about always? Some have even become our stories – a part of how we define ourselves. Sounds like we've made them quite 'precious'.

Fears are legitimate concerns. It's natural to worry – but it's not productive. If we focus on God, if we bring our fears to him, even the greatest worry can become a powerful prayer.
