The vocation of Marriage starts with the union of husband and wife and goes beyond it. Marriage bears fruits, which are children brought forth into this world. And it's never easy to nurture the marriage itself and the children at the same time. These challenges that continue to burden many people were all too familiar to Saint Joseph himself as he became the foster-father of Jesus. He treated the Blessed Mother as a responsible husband and the Divine Child, like a true biological father would – with all of his love and self-sacrifice. Saint Joseph toiled and provided them with all their physical needs like food, clothing, and a home. He was physically there for Mary- offering her his loving presence and constant support in parenthood. And he was physically there for Jesus as well- guiding Him in His steps, sharing with Him life stories, teaching Him not only carpentry but the value and dignity of work, praying with Him everyday and leading Him to a righteous upbringing.

Like Saint Joseph did, we must work on intensifying our determination, courage, and fortitude during harder life challenges.

Saint Joseph shows us that when we experience emotional challenges in our lives, we should not react with panic, rush in decision, discern with anger, or even throw tantrums. Without calmness, our decisions and choices are going to be clouded, but allow love, humility, and trust in God to take over our thoughts and actions.

The Blessed Mother Mary and Saint Joseph are to each other Most Chaste spouses, their marriage remained a sacred contract before God.

Married couples can all learn from Saint Joseph on how to work on the emotional challenges of being a husband or wife and strive to be a good one in the eyes of God. If we really want to enter a lifetime vocation such as marriage, then we must have the readiness and maturity to take on the emotional challenges that married life will surely throw at us. Let us start by praying to God, through Saint Joseph's intercession, to reveal to us our emotional weaknesses and ask for help to amend them.
