We Are All Connected a woman's perspective
Facebook! That social phenomenon we love to hate, we try to avoid, and we can't seem to do without. I have too many friends on Facebook. There are 'friends' from high school with whom I was never friends in high school. I barely remember them from those days, yet we're friends.

Facebook is a great tool for moms with young kids to stay connected, to laugh and share common frustrations. When I was a young mother with two small toddlers, in the middle of a brutal Montreal winter, a little connectedness would have gone a long way.

My number one fixation with Facebook is my grandchildren! My daughters-in-law are great to put pictures up often and that's all I need to make my day. It's also a great way to stay connected with family – my niece in Switzerland, and other nieces and nephews all along the Eastern seaboard, and my sisters and sisters-in-law (my brothers don't 'do' Facebook).

I have a friend with a wonderful sense of humor, but she suffers with bouts of depression. Her candidness on Facebook makes me uncomfortable on the one hand, but on the other, I admire her honesty and her ability to reach out. Most people on Facebook give us the impression their lives are a party. Laura, at least, tells the truth always.

The most curious friend I have on Facebook I have never met. We've been friends for nine years now. I've seen her children grow up, I've envied the trips she's taken, the cruises, the fact that she lives in southern California...This is how we 'met' - in January of 2009, she did a search on Facebook – she typed in her birth name – Margery McDonald – besides her own, mine was the only other profile that came up. So we became friends. Now her husband has a rare form of cancer and is fighting for his life. Their kids are in their teens – too young to lose a parent; too young to deal with such pain.

I stay out of the political fray on Facebook; I don't rant...and I ignore those who do. That was not the original intention of this social network – it was meant as an opportunity to connect with people – not to degrade, engage in hostile exchanges or rail against others' political or religious leanings. Lately, I see it as an opportunity to pray - for Margery's husband, for Laura, for my niece in Switzerland, with Crohn's disease.

So don't get annoyed with all the things people choose to do, say, post and vent about– pray for them; pray for your friends on Facebook; pray for people around the world. It's a soothing response in these troubled times.

Margery Frisch

A Seminarian's Thoughts:

As I said in earlier weeks, it was tough for me to adjust to the demanding lifestyle at the Legionary-run seminary. But eventually I did adapt, and I very much started to enjoy life there in New Hampshire. I made great friends. There were no cliques like in a typical high school. The Legionaries made sure of this by changing every month our assigned seat at meals. I got to know everyone in my grade; there were about forty of us. We were not allowed to talk to the younger kids (grade 7 & 8) or the older kids (grade 10-12).

I've compared the school to a boot camp. The strict discipline cemented our friendships, similar to how men who fought in WWII together became close. I'm not saying life was as difficult as fighting the Nazis, but I am saying that we naturally bond with those we go through tough times with. The Legion was our family. I spoke to my parents every week on the telephone and would write them a letter every Sunday. But they were 600 miles away. We even spent Christmas at the school and could go home only on Boxing Day. And we had to be back on the 30th of December. Our summer vacation was all of two-and-a-half weeks. If I was determined to become a Legionary priest, and I was, then all of this had to seem normal and good. But as the saying goes, "If you want to make God laugh, tell him your plans." God had other things in store for me. He was about to throw a curveball.

A Big Thank You to Our Catholic Schools – the food pantry at St. Mary's Church overflows with the generosity of the students from Notre Dame and St. Mary's High School. Their annual Thanksgiving food drives have provided us with many staples needed for the grocery bags that are prepared for emergency food needs. Our Catholic Charities ministry wishes to thank the teachers and especially the students of Notre Dame and St. Mary's High School for their generous giving. God bless you.

Memorial Mass - During November, the month of Remembrance, St. Mary's Bereavement Outreach Team hosts a Memorial Mass for all parishioners who have experienced the loss of a loved one, and especially for those bereaved in the past year. Following this service, a reception will be held in the Hall, to share memories and to commune together on common ground. All are welcome. Bring your family and friends: Tuesday, November 6th at 7:00 pm.
