The Story and You™

Sacred Conversations

Fifteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Our neighbors are the Master Gardeners behind the Urban Garden movement that has transformed long-neglected back yards like ours into fecund, flourishing farms. This is the eighth year they have labored in the spring chill and the summer heat to bring delicious food out of what was once our prickly lawn. Each week they load up the produce and take it to food banks around town. One hundred people eat out of our back yard every summer and fall. The mortifying truth is that, ten years ago, I had no idea where food came from. I'd never planted a garden, and so had never had the grace that comes from digging in dirt, planting, watering, and---ugh---weeding a little plot of ground, "giving seed to the one who sows, and bread to the one who eats" (Is. 55:10). That, come to think of it, is exactly the method given to us throughout our lives---a little love, a little sun, a little careful pruning and planting of the Word in our hearts---that has brought us safe to this day, where we take the time to read commentaries like this on the scriptures that are such food for our souls. What kind of seeds were planted in your heart that have borne fruit in you? I love asking people I admire---people who do generous, hard work in order to relieve suffering, or bring kindness, to anyone who asks---just exactly how they became who they are. The seed, scattered and sown that was planted in you, or maybe was never directly planted but blew your way, will be producing fruit long after you have gone to God. Keep weeding.

How have you grown in wonder at the abundant goodness of God?
