THE SACRED LITURGY THIS WEEK

Tuesday Sept 20, St. Andrew Kim Tae-Gõn, Paul Chõng Ha-Sang & companions. Today's feast honors 103 martyrs who brought the Christian faith to Korea. From the very beginning these Christians suffered terrible persecutions and many suffered martyrdom during the 19th century. Notable of these were Andrew Kim Taegon, the first Korean priest, and the lay apostle, Paul Chong Hasang.

Monday, Sept. 21, St. Matthew, Apostle also known as "Levi" and the "son of Alphaeus" was a tax collector for the Roman occupiers making him un-popular with his fellow Jews. In fact, Jews who held this office were not permitted to marry a Jewish woman nor worship in the synagogue and were generally shunned by civil society. Jesus calls out to Matthew: "Follow me" and he left all his interests to become a disciple of Jesus, embracing his teachings. His understanding and deep belief in Jesus was the impetus for The Gospel according to Matthew. Because of Matthew's duties as a public official, the Church has designated him as the patron saint of civil servants and all who serve government in some capacity.

Wednesday, Sept 23, St. Pio of Pietrelcina (1887-1968) was born in southern Italy into a family of farmers. At 15, he joined the Capuchins and took the name of Pio. On Sept.20, 1918, he had a vision of Jesus after Mass. When it ended, he had the stigmata in his hands, feet and side. Busloads of people soon began coming to see him and he spent most of his time hearing their confessions. In time his confessional ministry would take 10 hours a day; penitents had to take a number so that the situation could be handled. Many of them have said that Padre Pio knew details of their lives that they had never mentioned.

"Comfort the Sorrowful or Afflicted."

This is a work of mercy to restore a brother or sister to the normal Christian state of being joyful, confident, and strong.

Of all the spiritual works of mercy, comforting the sorrowful requires the greatest patience, sensitivity, and also silence. This is because sorrow (or grief) often has a life and logic of its own and often it must be allowed to run its course. Sometimes there is not a lot a person can say or do when grief is present. Grief is something we can rarely get around; we must simply go through it. Thus, comforting or consoling the sorrowful and grieving people in our life often involves a kind of silent and understanding accompaniment more so than words or actions. To listen and give understanding attention often provides the greatest value.

St. Augustine once observed that sighs and tears in prayer often accomplish more than words. And so when people are sorrowful, their grief and tears are their prayer and we do well to honor that, rather than to say, "Don't be sad" or "Cheer up." A largely silent and respectful silence can be a way of honoring grief and signaling a true camaraderie. St. Paul says, "Weep with those who weep" (Rom 12:15).

If one notices a person getting "stuck" in his grief, not making the progress of moving through it in stages, more will be needed—but not right away. People need time and room to grieve. Some take longer than others, and there is no single "right" way to grieve. To comfort and console requires sensitivity on our part that seeks to discover what the person needs, on his terms, not ours. If there are signs of true depression, or a serious lack of progress, this may be an indication that we should become more active in our comforting and consoling, perhaps getting the person out for activities or even recommending professional help.

In terms of caring for the sorrowful, we rightly think of giving comfort in the modern, English sense of the term. However, the word "comfort" in terms of its older, root meaning, involves something more vigorous than merely giving comfort, it meant to strengthen him, and "afflicted" in its Latin roots means to be struck down, weakened, or injured. So here to comfort means to restore him to strength, to enable him to persevere, to summon him to the courage that strongly resists those who would seek to render him weak or ineffective. This, then, is the vigorous understanding of the fourth Spiritual Work of Mercy, "comfort the sorrowful" or "comfort the afflicted." ~ Msgr. Charles Pope May 19, 2015
