They made signs, asking his father what he wished him to be called. He asked for a tablet and wrote, "John is his name," and all were amazed. Immediately his mouth was opened, his tongue freed, and he spoke blessing God.

Nativity of St. John the Baptist

When politicians decide whether to enter a race for office, one thing that they take into account is name recognition. It is generally pretty easy to win an election for school board or town supervisor without everyone knowing you because there is little competition for those posts. But entering a provincial or national race requires that the candidate be readily recognizable to voters either through previous service in public office or through a high profile career. A person has to have "made a name for her or himself" as the saying goes. It also doesn't hurt to be a name dropper along the campaign trail.

As we celebrate the birth of St. John the Baptist this weekend we hear the story of his naming. The tradition of passing a name on in the family was much stronger in the near East than it is in present day America. A string of names helped identify a person's tribe as well as his relationship within the group. When Elizabeth and Zechariah wanted to give their child the name "John," their neighbors and relatives immediately pointed out that none of their other relatives had that name.

In Luke's Gospel, what happens to John precedes-and in some ways foretells-what will happen to Jesus. There is the announcement of a miraculous conception. There is some hesitation on the part of the husband. A name is given to each child by an angel. There is a prediction of what this child will be. The fact that John's name (as well as Jesus') was divinely Selected, points to a greater reality at work. God has something to do with the direction of these lives. We, who carry the name Christian, should also recognize that God has something to do with the direction of our lives as well.

Stewardship – Birth of John the Baptist

From the moment of his birth, God had a special vocation planned for John the Baptist. John was indeed a good steward of his calling to “prepare the way” for our Lord. We too are called to be good stewards of our personal vocations, particularly our common vocation as Disciples of Christ. A lifestyle modeled on stewardship embraces this vocation in a manner that leads others to Christ.
