Eighteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time—July 31, 2016

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

The book of Ecclesiastes is perhaps the most hopeless book in sacred books of any religion. All is vanity. You can work all you want; you can be as rich as you want: you still end up dead and decomposing. People will forget you. It kind of makes you want to curl up and die. Why should I bother doing anything if it's not going to make a difference? The only thing is to perhaps have some comforts while I'm alive. Those are the words of "the Teacher," often rendered by the name "Qoheleth." They don't paint a very pretty picture. It's easy to become quite cynical. I've felt that way far more often than I would care to admit: "Life is useless; I might as well numb myself out, have a little pleasure in the moment." Thankfully, those days are mostly in the past for me. Yet, the world hasn't changed—I have!

Larry Broding states that Ecclesiastes challenges us to make a choice: "to become selfish and cynical, or to reach out to God." The author of the book made that choice; in the midst of the sufferings of the day, he chose to keep faith that there is a God, and that somehow things would make sense. It's like living "as if": Live as if everything is just as it should be. Live as if your dreams are being fulfilled, and the world is full of love. People who do that tend to be people who leave traces of joy and life wherever they pass. They live "as risen beings in history," as one theologian put it.

So what would happen if I lived as if the values of the Kingdom were what mattered, as if I didn't need to embrace today's society's values of spending and consumerism? What would happen if I lived as if the words in this weekend's Letter to the Colossians were true, and that "Christ is all in all," no matter what our origin? What would happen if I accepted that I am the one who needs to change? It might be fun trying to find out.

Liturgy Corner

Part 7 of a 12 part series about the design of Catholic churches

Part 7: The Ambo

The dignity of the Word of God requires that a church have a place for it to be proclaimed for all to hear. That place is the ambo. As the table of the Word, the ambo should demonstrate a relationship with the table of the Eucharist. This may be done through the use of the same materials and similar design, and by its location in relation to the altar. The ambo is where the scripture readings are proclaimed, where the Responsorial Psalm and the Easter Proclamation (Exsultet) are chanted, where the homily is preached, and where the intentions of the Prayer of the Faithful may be announced. It should not be used for announcements, lectures, or any other purposes. If possible, the ambo should be fixed rather than movable, signifying the permanence of the Word of God (General Instruction of the Roman Missal, 309).

What is meant when by coming into full communion with the Church?

Coming into full communion with the Catholic Church describes the process called Candidates, usually participate in a formation program to help them understand and experience the teachings and practices of the Catholic Church. Although some preparation may be with Catechumens preparing for baptism, the preparation for Candidates is different since they have already been baptized and committed to Jesus Christ, and many have also been active members of other Christian communities. If you or someone you know would like to know more about becoming Catholic, please let us know. The Church welcomes all! Catholics who want to help welcome others into the Church are needed too. Contact Kevin Mannara, CSB, at the parish office or at kmannaracsb@gmail.com. There is no obligation for those seeking to initiate a relationship with Christ or to learn more about the Catholic Church.

The way we experience illness and disability is an index of the love we are ready to offer. It is the measure of our freedom to give meaning to life's experiences, even when they strike us as meaningless and unmerited.

Stress in Your Marriage?

There are only three weeks left to sign up for Retrouvaille

Retrouvaille is a program for married couples that feel bored, frustrated or angry in their marriage. Some experience coldness and simply shut down. Others experience conflict and arguments in their relationship. Most don't know how to change the situation or even communicate with their spouse about it. This program has helped 10's of 1000's of couples experience marital difficulty at all levels including disillusionment and deep misery. For confidential information about, or to register for the upcoming program beginning with a weekend on August 19, 20 and 21, 2016, call 1-800-705-6356. More information can be found at retrouvaillewindsor.weebly.com.
