Twenty-Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time—September 18, 2016

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Once again, I am overwhelmed by the generosity in this parish. You touch my soul deeply. Thank you to those of you who are helping to sponsor my trip to be on team with CPT in Hebron. For those who still wish to donate, there is a box on the table near the back of the church for cash or cheques (made out to CPT or to me). Or, you can do this online at cpt.org/donate. If you choose that option, please note that it is for Maurice Restivo. And, please come on September 26th at 7:00 pm in Rosary Hall for a slide show and talk about the kind of things that CPT does. After reading this weekend's gospel passage, I'd like to assure you that I'll do what I can to be an honest steward of your funds. In other words, I will both be praying for you and be fully present to those we serve on team.

The parables in Chapter 16 of Luke's Gospel are somewhat confusing and perturbing. Yet they are in our Bible; they are in the Gospel, which means Good News. So what are we to make of it? One way of looking at this is proposed by Rev. Whitney Rice, a US Episcopalian priest. Let's consider what the dishonest manager does: He forgives debts! Kind of makes you wonder, doesn't it? I think we've probably heard that somewhere else in the gospels. But why didn't Jesus just say that clearly? Maybe, just maybe, it's that our lives are complicated, and sometimes there are no easy answers. Fr. Rice says:

Jesus doesn't tell simple stories because none of us live simple stories. Think of the way the connections you have to the people you love sometimes get hopelessly tangled and snarled, until you can't remember what the problem was in the first place, but you sure can't figure out how to fix it now. Think of the times you've been between a rock and a hard place, knowing that any decision you make will hurt someone. Think of the times you've been driven by circumstances to a place where compromising your integrity seems like a small price to pay if it will just get you out of this mess. ...

Jesus knows that our lives are not black and white, and he also knows that we need guidance to live out of our better selves. And so he gives us the gift of forgiveness. ...

"Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who sin against us." That's what happens in this parable. The dishonest manager is forgiven even as he forgives others. And this is the best part: It's not neat and tidy and clean cut. There are still loose ends and ethical questions and uncertainty.

And if that's the case, maybe it's time that I, who am complicated and a sinner, need to go and forgive others—and be forgiven myself!

Fr. Maurice

Quotable Pope Francis

Only a Church capable of attentive concern for all those who knock on Her door can speak to them of God. Unless we can see into people's suffering and recognize their needs, we will have nothing to offer them.

The Pope's prayer intentions for September

Universal: Centrality of the Human Person—That each may contribute to the common good and to the building of a society that places the human person at the center.

Evangelization: Mission to Evangelize—That by participating in the Sacraments and meditating on Scripture, Christians may become more aware of their mission to evangelize.

Liturgy Corner

Liturgy question from a parishioner

I recently visited a parish in another diocese and they did some things differently at Mass. As Catholics, shouldn't we all do everything the same?

This is not a new question. In fact, the same question was asked in the 4th century. Here is the response of Saint Augustine: "I am sadly aware that there are many disturbances among the faithful. Some put forth as certain what cannot be justified by the authority of sacred scripture, or by the tradition of the universal Church, or by its usefulness for bettering Christian life. They justify it only by some reasoning of their own, or because it is the custom in their own region, or because they saw it done somewhere on a journey they made, and as a result they consider themselves more expert in these things. They make such a fuss that nothing is right unless it is done their way."

—Kevin Mannara C.S.B.
