Alcoholic Anonymous meet every Saturday at 8pm Knights of Columbus room.

I have utterly surprised myself. With the daunting prospect to the shutting down of so much in society due to the virus, I was sure that I would miss the sports world and find myself entirely bored out of my mind. I'm not a huge basketball fan, though I always watch March Madness, the university basketball competition mostly because I get roped into some pool. I am disappointed that the Olympics are postponed because I have always loved them and they are the primary reason I studied Sports Administration in the first place. I think I am much more disappointed for the athletes themselves, especially the ones in the more obscure sports like judo or rowing or track cycle because they only come to the viewers at these quadrennial celebrations. With the proliferation of cheating through performance enhancing drugs and the overt professionalization of the sports, something has been lost in the purity and integrity of the Games so it is not a huge loss for me anymore. Now as anybody who knows anything about hockey would realize the Toronto Maple Leafs were entering that pre-playoff zone with the momentum that was going to propel them to the Stanley Cup- this was going to be their year, but alas... So I must confess that I really have not missed the absence of these exorbitantly paid entertainers. Not one of them is helping keep my mother clean, fed, and entertained during this virus. Those are the people doing extraordinary things. But I have not been at a loss for things to do. I myself am shocked at how much life fills the vacancy. I must admit that I do come from a competitive family and so every once in a while I still have that itch. As luck would have it, another chipmunk invaded my space and so I was bound and determined to defeat this foe. I dug out my trap and went to bait it with peanut butter but I had none. I found a few crumbs of walnuts which I thought would do the trick. I saw the little rodent darting around my patio so I loaded it up with the walnuts and perched myself to in living room to await the victory. Now although my trap says it is good for chipmunks, I find that they do not weigh enough to trip the trap so I attach a string to the lever and give it a quick yank that drops the trap door. It took a couple of minutes but curiosity got the better of the rodent and he soon started sneaking around the trap trying to get at the walnuts. He hopped up top trying to get in but eventually he found the open door. He paused and surveyed all around him and then thought better of it and scurried off. I thought I had lost, but no sooner had I started to get up then I saw him run back, and without much hesitation he dashed into the cage. One good yank and I had trapped him. Unfortunately the closed door of the trap prevented him from seeing my victory dance. There were a couple of fist pumps and then a couple of versus of 'We are the Champions' and then a mighty finger pointing up to heaven, thanking St. Francis of Assisi for this victory.

Fr. Roy

So What’s happening with Baptisms, First Communions, Confirmations...!

So for baptisms, first communions, confirmations, and even marriages, the current situation has left us somewhat helpless as to what will be happening. We have not made tentative plans though we have been tossing around ideas but it is all dependent upon when we will be able to open up the churches. As the Cardinal indicated when he Zoomed with all the priests, the opening is totally up to the Chief Medical Officers. He said that in all likelihood, it will be a slow process. When we are given the okay, the churches will first be open to private prayer. Then, when we are given the okay for small groups, weekday masses may resume, and limited celebrations of funerals and weddings. Finally when the ban on large groups is lifted, we will be able to gather once again for Sunday worship, but not until. It would be next to impossible to seat people abiding by the social distancing standards which would severely limit the number of people allowed in the church. How would we say who is in or when people would have to be turned away because our quota was full. That seems like a distant reality at this point and time, so we wait and we pray.

Sacramental Corner.....

Attention all High School Grads

Although I am sure this is not how you pictured your high school career ending, you are not forgotten. Once again the Knights of Columbus and Catholic Women’s Guild are offering bursaries to those who are moving off into higher education or into the workforce. It is our way of saying thank you to the years of service and participation in our Parish Community. So now is the time to submit an application for one. You can email the Parish Office and we can send you an application form.

We would like to know what aspects of our Parish life you have been involved in whether ministries, or helping out at various parish functions.

We would like to know what your plans are for September, where and what you will be studying, or where you will be working.

So if you are finishing your high school career this Spring, and you have contributed to our Parish Life, get your application in before the end of Mass (May 31).

Let us pray for the sick...
