Ruminations

Thanksgiving was an artistic time. It was when the refrigerator was festooned with colourful pages of harvest vegetables and wheat all emerging from a cornucopia. Every household who had elementary school-aged children likely had the same pictures taped to their fridge. At our house, my efforts of staying in the lines of the requisite thanksgiving template always took pride of place while the schlock of my younger brothers' works were relegated to the side of or the bottom of the fridge. It was my parents' favorite holiday. It was the one annual celebration when we got to relax and be at home with little other concern that having a meal together. All the other events required much more preparation and the stress (albeit good stress for the most part) of travelling to be with family, and depending on what family it was dictated how much thanksgiving there was. Options on a holiday Monday were few and far between. First, television on the two channels that we got was not conducive to sitting around watching. Of course there were no play stations or gaming systems. Nothing was open to go shopping or hang around the mall mostly because there was no mall and it was early enough in the hockey season and there was a civility in sporting schedules that respected the holiday as a family day unencumbered by the demands of tournament travel. That meant it was either boredom or playing outside, raking leaves and jumping into piles. Back then the leaves were raked either for piling up and or eventually burning. There was nothing like the autumn smell of burning leaves in the big 45 gallon drums in the back yard. Curbside pickup of yard waste wasn't even in the picture. So Thanksgiving Day was spent out in the crisp fresh air. Then late in the afternoon as the daylight was waning, we would make a mad dash home from whatever part of the neighbourhood we were in. The minute we stepped into the house we could smell the delicious aroma of a turkey fresh out of the oven and the sweet smell of a cinnamon infused apple pie with apples we had picked from the orchard at my aunts' farm a few weeks back. It was a pretty standard fair. Turkey and gravy, mashed potatoes, (not garlic mashed potatoes because garlic was not trendy back then), carrots and green beans, freshly made dinner rolls and the most despicable dish of turnip and brown sugar. It was aptly named because I always turned up my nose and just passed it around. The dinner table was always a fun place mostly started by dad. When someone asked for the buns to be passed, dad would oblige by actually passing a bun through the air.

There was always laughter and fun, and all the hostilities of four boys growing up together and bickering and fighting were left at the door, at least for one meal. Looking back at those innocent days, I think I am more thankful now than I ever was then. It was almost a perfect Norman Rockwell setting. Happy Thanksgiving. Fr. Roy

FIRST COMMUNION

Please be sure to mark your calendars for the Tuesday October 29th Parents Reconciliation Catechesis Meeting @ 7-9pm. This is for parents only and there are no make up meetings. Meetings and retreats are mandatory to attend!

It was wonderful to see so many enthusiastic parents at the Parent Information Meeting on Oct 2nd. Parents were reminded that First Communion is not just a one time event. The Sacrament of Eucharist is a wonderful initiation into a way of living authentic Catholics lives. Your child's reflections forms are to be dropped off in the box located outside the parish office door. Children, be sure to get a sticker each Sunday to decorate your purple folders.

CONFIRMATION

Great to see all the youth and their parents at Wednesday night's meeting. We are going to enjoy a blessed year with all the candidates and their parents, too.

This will be a time to reflect on how God is touching your hearts and how are you responding to God's Word. Candidates, be sure to drop your completed 'breaking open the word' reflection forms after Sunday mass.

The CWG is having a Raffle for a beautiful queen-sized quilt. This quilt, now hung in the gathering place, was expertly pieced and amazingly quilted. Funds received from ticket sales will go for Parish needs and to CWG charities. Tickets will be on sale after each of the Masses starting October 12 and 13. Tickets are $2 each or 3 for $5. The raffle draw will take place at the Christmas Bazaar.
