ISSUE	FACT	WHAT YOU CAN DO
Xenoestrogens are industrially made compounds such as PCB, BPA & Phthalates and are found in plastics and plastic wrap.	They mimic or interfere with estrogen in our bodies & form a subset of a broader group of chemicals known as endocrine disruptors that go directly to the tissues bi-passing the liver for detoxification. They are implicated in medical problems such as breast cancer and reproductive function in males and females. Even small amounts of environmental endocrine disruptors concern scientists.	Avoid cling wrap & replace wrap on meats and other foods before freezing or refrigerating. Never heat food with plastic in microwave-use glass instead. Avoid Teflon – use cast iron. Minimize use of tin cans. Don't drink from Styrofoam cups or containers. Read: " Our Stolen Future " a book about endocrine disruption.
