Archbishop's Message: A New Year Tinged with Frustration:

Here we are in 2021. Happy New Year! Everyone was relieved to see the end of 2020 marked by a pandemic that disrupted much of the normal life we had. But as we enter the New Year, we unfortunately realize that the devastation caused by the infamous corona virus is growing. Without a doubt, this reality frustrates us and shortens our patience.

Clergy and faithful have many questions. Some question the seriousness of the Coronavirus and think the precautions put in place are disproportionate, such as the current lock down containment. Some criticize the civil and religious authorities for the restrictions imposed on the Church, decrying the loss of our religious freedom. There are also questions about liturgical life, such as why it is not permitted to receive communion on the tongue at this time. Many are concerned about the safety of new vaccines and whether it is morally acceptable to receive a vaccine developed using stem cells from an aborted fetus.

Since opinions on these topics are very divided, both among the faithful and among clergy, you can imagine how easy it is to be divided and to criticize each other. Anxiety, fatigue, discouragement and loss of autonomy increase the amount of frustration and can create an untenable situation.

In light of this reality, I know it is important to support you during these difficult times and to encourage you in your pastoral efforts. We must not lose our raison d'être as disciples of Jesus Christ. We must manage this time of crisis in a serene and balanced way. God has never abandoned his people throughout the history of salvation. It is important, therefore, to be attentive to his presence and to tell ourselves that God has something to teach us.

I believe that it would be profitable as a diocesan Church to communicate a clear and common message to all. There is strength in unity. Dissension weakens us and sows the seeds of uncertainty and mistrust. I invite us all, therefore, to reflect on our interior disposition, our attitude and the message that we convey. Are we ready to unite with our sisters and brothers, our parish family and our pastor to foster peace, respect and charity? Next week, I will propose some guidelines to help you with certain questions that, at this time, deserve some clarification.

Please continue to pray for me, as I do for you.
