THE VIRTUE OF JUSTICE

According to Scripture, the first duty of justice is to give thanks and praise to God. Borrowing from Plato but consistent with God's Word, St. Thomas Aquinas defined justice as "giving to another what is their due, including God." Therefore, to worship a false god is not just idolatry but injustice because glory is given to another instead of the living God to whom it is due. That is why in one of the Prefaces for Mass, we pray: "It is truly right and just, our duty and our salvation, always and everywhere to give you thanks, Lord." Justice is always linked to faith and right praise. There is another principle of justice in the Scriptures, which is that of right order. There is an order with which God created the world, and it is visible in the Garden of Eden before the Fall. Everything was as it should be, but then sin occurred, and this order was thrown off-kilter. The effects of sin caused an imbalance and introduced injustice into God's creation. The prophet Amos talks about "tampering the scales" (Amos 8:5), which is the perfect image for the rupture of justice where one group goes up, having too much, and another group goes down, having too little. For Jesus himself, his ministry of mercy was always linked to justice. His encounters of mercy with sinners always led to the conversion and change in the person. We see this with the call of Matthew, the woman caught in adultery, and Zacchaeus, whose conversion translated into his restoring what he had stolen (Luke 19:1-10). In the parable of the workers in the vineyard, the owner is just but also generous and merciful, paying the last worker according to his need and not according to what he deserved (Matt. 20:1-16). In the Beatitudes, Jesus called "blessed" those who "hunger and thirst for the cause of right," for they will be satisfied (Matt. 5:6). On the cross, we see God's judgment on the world and the greatest injustice ever committed on full display when the just and sinless one was unjustly condemned and killed. As we gaze on his cross, we see the horror of sin and injustice. - Fr. Billy Swan, Word on Fire
