IMITATE ST. JOSEPH

ST. JOSEPH

Who can doubt that this man is a good patron for us?

This man of humble, everyday routine, this man of silent performance of duty, of honest righteousness, of manly piety?

Christians of today might find their way back to what is best in them if the individuality of this man, their patron, were again producing more stature in them. Granted, a nation must have greatness of spirit and pioneers who will lead her to new goals. Just as much, if not more, however, a nation needs men and women of lifelong performance of duty, of clear headed loyalty, of discipline of heart and body.

A nation needs men . . . of genuine reverence, conquerors of themselves, who hear the voice of God and carry out the infinite decrees of conscience. A nation needs men who do not lose confidence in God's grace, even when they have to seek it as lost, as Joseph once sought the Divine Child.

Such men are urgently needed in every situation.
