From the Pastor's Desk:

How are you doing? This is a question that we hear often during these days of the pandemic and a province wide shut down. What may seem as a simple question is worth considering for ourselves. The polite answer is to simply say "fine, how are you?" And perhaps this is the best way to handle that question as we navigate conversations with passersby on our daily walks, but it is still a question worth pondering for ourselves. How am I doing? This question is worth bringing into prayer, spending some time with it, and speaking to God about it. Our problem with these sorts of questions is not the question itself, but the way in which it has made it into our everyday usage. So often we use it as a greeting, synonymous with a hello as we are passing people by, which has a potential of dismissing the depth of what it is actually inviting us to consider. I invite you to consider this as a deeper reflection with God. How am I doing? Why am I feeling the way I am? Where is God in my experience, in my feeling, in my daily struggle? To ask a question and seek God's insight as an answer can bring greater clarity and peace, and that is so needed these days. God helps us to answer the deepest questions, if we only take the time to consider them seriously in His presence.
