Who's in Charge? a woman's perspective
Last Saturday I was dusting the living room, when, on the table where the orchids stood, I found a card, just sitting there. It said, "Good Morning! This is God. I will be handling all your problems today. I will not need your help, so enjoy your day."
I looked up, I looked around. I don't know where the card came from or how it got there (my husband was on a camping trip with our son and grandson, so there was no one to ask), but the warmth I felt from reading that card, was indescribable.

I promptly set down my duster, sauntered into the kitchen and made a cup of tea. Basking in that warmth, I sipped my tea while reading a good book. In time I wandered back into the living room and looked around.
"Ah," I said, looking heavenward, "my strong aversion to house-work is not one of those problems you were talking about. Deeper problems are more your concern. I get it."
Still, those kind words had lifted me up and I did have that nice little respite with the cup of tea, so I was refreshed and ready to resume the task at hand.
How often do we forget who's in charge? How often do we go through our days with lists of things we must do, people we must see, jobs we must complete, with no thought of God and what he has in mind for us?
Or, do you ever have this feeling? An overwhelming sense that you are doing God's will. You get all puffed up with this thought, immersed in this sense of the Divine that you sit back, bringing your work to a standstill. Well that's not what God has in mind either. We may feel his commendation, his support, but he does expect us to get the work done.
The problems he offers to handle for us are the heavy ones, the burdens too heavy for us to carry alone. Over time, we begin to wonder how we can possibly get through – tragedies, illnesses, deaths of our loved ones...
"Good morning!" he says, "This is God. I will be handling all your problems today, I will not need your help, so enjoy your day." If we sit in quiet contemplation, we will know this; we will know he is there, we will feel his presence. We don't need a little card sitting on a table to remind us that God is always there for us. Still, a card from a loved one is always welcome, isn't it? Enjoy your day. Margery Frisch

Marriage Tip of the Month: It is important every now and then that spouses deliberately consider the needs and/or desires of their partner over their own, even if it may not be their first choice of action. Acknowledging a spouse in this manner, in a variety of different circumstances, tells them that you are listening when they express their feelings/desires, puts their needs above your own and makes them feel both cared for and listened to by the one they love. When both remember to act in this manner, couples feel closer, see less anger in their relationship and experience the satisfying feelings of being cared for.
