PENTECOST

In his letter to the Romans, today's second reading, St. Paul describes the multiple ways the Holy Spirit transforms our inner life. It enables us to reflect on the many traditional symbols of the Holy Spirit. One image we use is that of a dove. At Jesus' baptism, the Holy Spirit appeared in the form of a dove to show that the Holy Spirit is not a product of earth but a gift from heaven. The Holy Spirit enables us to live with a depth of connection to God that is not naturally possible on our own.

The Holy Spirit is also seen as fire like the flames that descended on the apostles. Fire can take the form of light that guides our way. It can be heat that warms the chill. It can be a cleansing fire that burns away debris. It can be a fire that scorches to make way for new growth. The Holy Spirit can work in our life in similar ways. The Holy Spirit illuminates our mind to recognize the truth. The Spirit can warm the coldness of hearts distanced from God and others. The Holy Spirit can cleanse us and set us free from difficult memories and a burdening past. The Holy Spirit can burn out evil from our hearts to leave space for the grace of God.

The Holy Spirit is compared to breath. Jesus breathes on the apostles, sending His own Spirit into them. The Holy Spirit is like blood in the body that brings the oxygen of Christ's grace to people around us. The Holy Spirit has no Gospel of His own. The Spirit reminds us of everything Jesus called us to be.

Finally, the Holy Spirit is compared to water. Water irrigates, nourishes, gives growth and can also destroy. In our life and the life of the Church, the Holy Spirit gives daily growth to fidelity. Sometimes, as well, the Holy Spirit can come with a torrent of power to eliminate what is obsolete and a barrier to the Gospel today.

Excerpts from "Captured Fire" by S. Joseph Krempa
