PADRE PIO ON VIRTUES

There are three virtues that perfect the devout person in terms of disciplining the senses: modesty, continence, and chastity. Through modesty, a devout soul succeeds in ruling over all its external actions. St. Paul was quite right to recommend this virtue to everyone and to claim that it was necessary. On top of that, Paul wants that virtue to be seen by others. Through continence, the soul succeeds in keeping the senses of sight, touch, taste, smell, and hearing away from excessive pleasures, even permissible ones. With chastity, the virtue that transforms our nature into an angelic one, the soul keeps sensuality in check and turns it away from pleasures that are forbidden.

There you have the noblest picture of Christian perfection. Blessed is the soul that possesses these virtues, all of which are fruits of the Holy Spirit who indwells it. That soul has nothing to fear. It will shine forth in the world like the sun in the midst of the firmament. (To Raffaolina Cerase, October 23, 1914)
