Reflection: Kingdom behaviour invites us to be humble, take the last place, so that we can be exalted, but when we do otherwise, then we will be embarrassed and disgraced. But why do we crave prominence, honour and self-exaltation? I wonder if there will be any genuine answer, but we should know that as time passes by, prominence, honour and anything that is self-serving will be forgotten. Thus, anything that we do for the love of ourselves, for our own exaltation will not be remembered with affection. But our acts of humility, simplicity and goodness will outlive us; it will permanently be carved in the heart of God and the hearts of those who know us. Jesus also expands the picture of humility by exhorting His audience to invite to their dinner table the needy and those who can not repay such kindness. Hospitality should be open to all.
